

ENVIRONMENTAL AWARENESS WORKSHOPS

- ▶ The most cost-effective way to reduce the energy usage and emissions of your business is simple, long-term behaviour change

To incite complete organisational behaviour change, you must start with the individual; educate and inform them as to why they should engage in certain behaviours, encouraging them to integrate it as part of their normal routine and habits. Once this has happened then simple things like turning off lights and instead opening blinds, or turning off computers and monitors when stepping out for a meeting can generate energy savings visible at the organisational level.

“Your workforce is likely the largest contributor to your energy bills and emissions, manage them”

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS:

Why do I need to improve the awareness of my organisation?

Telling individuals within your company what they should do is not enough, they need to know why they should do something and appreciate the potential impact they can have as a collective.

What does it cost and what do I get for my money?

Our services are bespoke and tailored to your needs so costs do vary depending upon your individual requirements. We can arrange a range of presentations with related participation-centred activities and quizzes, etc.

Who else has done this?

Any growing business will testify to the importance of improving understanding and increasing employee involvement when you want organisational change.
